Learn how to effectively handle
disclosures by Adult Survivors of Childhood Sexual Abuse

Developed and delivered by a survivor

One in four women is affected by Childhood Sexual Abuse (CSA). This training deals specifically with women who have been sexually abused as children.

The most common time for a woman to disclose her abuse is during pregnancy, childbirth, early parenting, and any other time of stress or trauma. If you are working with women, particularly around these times this training deals with how to effectively handle a disclosure and what steps to take next in assisting the healing process.

The training will cover:

- What constitutes CSA
- Who are perpetrators of CSA
- The survivors rights
- Dealing effectively with disclosures
- What's available for survivors
- Policy and procedure development (optional)
